the multi-field methodology-encompassing, inter-disciplinary character of the Conference, we strongly encourage potential participants and stakeholders with background and research interests in the fields of Sociology and Social Work, Criminological Sciences and Sociology of deviance, European Studies, International Relations and Security Studies, Political Sciences, History and Philosophy to apply. Therefore, international participation is mostly welcomed and appreciated - researchers, PhD candidates and professionals are gladly invited to submit articles that focus on the topics presented.

Participation Basis and Structure of the Conference Sessions

There are currently numerous challenges to be tackled in approaching past and present subjects on society.

The rationale for the Conference relies on initiating reflection and launching debates on the following main topics: Sociology and Social Work, Criminological Sciences and Sociology of deviance, European Studies, International Relations and Security Studies, Law and Criminology, Politics, History and Philosophy.

The conference sessions for paper presentations are as follows:

- Session 1 – Sociology and Social Work
- Session 2 – Criminological Sciences and Sociology of deviance
- Session 3 – European Studies
- Session 4 - International Relations and Security Studies
- Session 5 - Law
- Session 6 – Politics and History
- Session 7 - Philosophy

The Conference sessions welcome papers approaching theoretical studies and empirical research, good practice examples or lessons learnt in practice.

Conference Themes, Topic Descriptions and Panels

Session 1: Sociology and Social Work "New social realities in the context of Covid-19" and "Promoting the Importance of Human Relationships"

In the context of new social realities, social phenomena and processes contain unique aspects and challenges that must be exploited in theoretical debates. Different cultural communities develop distinctly paths for their own "welfare status" and adopt different strategies and lifestyles. Bad things happen in nowadays society, like political and economic turbulence which has destabilized communities and dislocated individual lives, or good things like the extension of new technologies which is creating possibilities for new forms of interpersonal relationships, as well as a revival of grassroots community and political engagement. In this new reality, sociological debate and the formation or strengthening of specialist networks, could contribute to both wider public engagement and policy-making.

Social Work session has the same "motto" with the "World Social Work Day". The present society, with its primordial desire to create economic performance, unfortunately, overshadows the risks of marginalization and gross inequality along with social exclusion. Therefore, the debates on these issues are essential. Session 2: Criminological Sciences and Sociology of deviance

Modern societies today are characterized by high rates of deviance that produce their effects on the lives of other affiliates. The actors of such deviance are above all the new generations who have lost their points of reference and orient their lives in the continuous search for new stimuli through transgressive behavior. It is important, therefore, to reflect on the future of societies, social policies, prevention, and social control which, in many cases, is not very effective. It is also necessary to reflect on new forms of deviance linked to technology and emergencies such as the Covid19 pandemic in progress.

Papers on the subject may address the following:

- The new generations and modern society
- Youth and alcohol
- Youth and drugs
- Female deviance
- Physical violence
- Sexual assaults
- Bullying and cyberbullying
- Deviant behavior on the net
- Intra-family relationships
- New perspectives of social control
- New perspectives for the prevention of deviant behaviour on young people

Session 3: European studies: "United in diversity"

Facing an era of new challenges, the European Union needs to prove both its members and other international partners that it is still a viable construction, bringing together in one voice the interests of 28 countries. Nowadays, Europe needs to find the responses of the states and the continent's collective institutions to the challenges posed by the several crises it has faced, thus creating a series of contradictions—many of which reiterate large questions from Europe's past, while also affecting the ability of social forces to imagine possible futures.

This panel invites contributions addressing the following issues:

- cultural Identities in Europe
- economic or social integration in the EU
- EU Cohesion Policy - future challenges today
- legitimacy and European foreign policy
- rethinking European neighborhoods
- regulation and the business environment in Europe
- social and cultural challenges of migration in EU
- the balance of powers and division of competences between the EU and the Member States

Session 4: International Relations and Security Studies: "Security issues in a changing world"

In the international context of world politics post-9/11, many of the analyses on international relations focus on arguing on the relationship between security and the ways in which various types of threats can impact on the respect of presumed democratic politics.

We invite paper proposals addressing the field of international relations and related questions about security politics in different areas from a theoretical, empirical or normative perspective

- building contemporary foreign policy
- building diplomatic tools to address new types of threats
- global interests and regional policies
- inter-organizational contributions to global order
- regional and global alliances
- security politics: from conceptual framework to practice

Session 5: Law: "No man is above the law and no man is below it"

The section Law aims at gathering scientific researches that help explain the new changes in the fields of Law. This section aims to promote research and developments of a conceptual, normative and empirical nature in all the major sub-areas of the fields and to combine latest progress in theory with new empirical outcomes across a range of areas relevant to the study of Criminology and Law.

Papers on the subject may explore the following:

- security, rights and criminal justice
- socio-legal studies
- private law
- international law
- jurisprudence and legal theory
- constitutional and administrative law
- commercial law

Session 6: Politics and History: "History and Politics through time"

In the XXI-th century the study of history without politics and vice versa is an incomplete approach. The two disciplines are complementary, highlighting contemporary political problems from a historical perspective and investigating past from a political perspective.

A debate over history issues is welcome because nowadays many problems (political, social, economic etc.) can find their solution through careful analysis of the events that took place through time.

Papers addressing aspects of the history and politics, and research results on topics such as the following are expected:

- historical personalities
- international relations
- international organizations
